

The image from Jo Whaley is very unusual and does not remind me of anything, this is because it is a very unique image therefore it stands out, whereas the image taken by Keith Arnott looks like a more everyday picture, this is where these two differ. The picture from Keith Arnott reminds me of reports you would find in the local news paper or something in a gardening center talking about natural waste.

The lines in the first photograph are more flowing but you have the awkward sharp lines.